

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Two dimethylarginine dimethylaminohydrolase (DDAH) genes have been cloned from humans. These genes can be used to screen for inhibitors and activators of activity and/or expression of DDAHs. Inhibitors and activators of activity and/or expression of DDAHs are useful in the treatment of conditions in which abnormal metabolism of nitric oxide is implicated.